There's no do-it-yourself manual for disaster recovery. It's tough and it tests us all.

That's why we need experienced and capable councillors to meet the challenge head on.

Rated by The Press as one of its top councillors - an intelligent, eloquent, hard-worker who adds much needed value I chair the Environment and Infrastructure Committee, overseeing the rebuild of our damaged infrastructure. I've steered Banks Peninsula through its challenging amalgamation. I'm a Canterbury Museum boardmember and Christchurch and Canterbury Tourism director.

This term I've championed Council's transitional city approach, been a driving force for Sumner's Coastal pathway, realised Christchurch's popular new cycleways and campaigned for a successful city rebuild that works for its people.

The Council faces immense challenges during the next decade. It must be willing to do things differently, strengthen confidence in its leadership and systems, remove obstacles and involve people. I'm committed to achieving these goals.
